SearchPath is pleased to announce David Simcox as Managing Partner of its newest executive search franchise, SearchPath of Wall Street.

Comprehensive industry knowledge, unfaltering loyalty and relentless determination have earned Mr. Simcox a repeat customer rating of 100 percent. “I take deep concern and compassion to put the right person in the right role,” Simcox says. “It is not just making a placement — it is strategically aligning someone with their career goals and objectives.”

With over 27 years of experience as a recruiter and sales executive, Mr. Simcox specializes in back, middle and front office operations and business management for financial service firms, including asset management, wealth management, banking, capital markets and hedge funds.

Clients can be confident that SearchPath of Wall Street never pulls resumes from job boards, preferring instead to recruit the old-fashioned way — through established relationships, trustworthy referrals and detailed research.

At SearchPath of Wall Street, senior level recruiters procure business and technical professionals for the financial service industry in positions such as managing directors, executive directors, architects, program managers, project managers, business analysts and application developers.

While the average professional changes jobs every three years, Mr. Simcox’s placements average a tenure of seven years, with some exceeding 20 years. His screening process assures a near perfect match between the expertise and aptitude that his clients seek and the experience and aspirations of candidates.

Mr. Simcox’s proven track record, impeccable reputation, and extensive portfolio of leading industry contacts, ensures that the best way to identify, screen, recruit, relocate and retain the finest talent obtainable is through SearchPath of Wall Street.
